

Southeast Asian Numismatic Extremes

Numismatics · Practice Test · 15 Questions

---

1. What is considered the largest denomination ever officially minted and circulated in pre-colonial Southeast Asia, based on weight and intrinsic metal value?

- A) A silver Tael coin from the Qing Dynasty in Vietnam
- B) A large gold 'Kula' coin from the Lanna Kingdom (Thailand)
- C) A colossal bronze 'Chi' coin from the Khmer Empire (Cambodia)
- D) A heavy iron 'Keping' from the Sultanate of Malacca

2. Which Southeast Asian country holds the record for the longest continuous use of a single, virtually unchanged coin design throughout centuries of dynastic rule?

- A) Joseon Dynasty Korea
- B) Sukhothai Kingdom of Thailand
- C) Champa Kingdom of Vietnam
- D) Majapahit Empire of Indonesia

3. The 'Sea Turtle' coinage of which pre-modern Southeast Asian polity is the earliest example of a government officially issuing currency shaped like a specific animal?

- A) Kingdom of Pagan (Myanmar)
- B) Kingdom of Ayutthaya (Thailand)
- C) Sultanate of Brunei
- D) Kingdom of Singhasari (Indonesia)

4. Which Southeast Asian nation produced what is widely believed to be the smallest officially minted coin by diameter for everyday circulation in its history?

- A) Singapore
- B) Philippines
- C) Malaysia
- D) Indonesia

5. The 'Sari' coinage of the Pagan Kingdom (modern-day Myanmar) featured what unusual metallic composition for its time, setting it apart from many contemporary regional currencies?

- A) Pure electrum (gold-silver alloy)
- B) A lead-tin alloy
- C) A very high percentage of nickel
- D) Primarily traded cowrie shells treated with metal

6. What Southeast Asian kingdom is credited with issuing the earliest known examples of a currency featuring complex pictorial representations of mythological creatures rather than just abstract symbols or rulers' portraits?

- A) Khmer Empire (Cambodia)
- B) Srivijaya Empire (Indonesia/Malaysia)
- C) Lanna Kingdom (Thailand)
- D) Champa Kingdom (Vietnam)

7. The 'Piso Fuerte' (Strong Peso) of the First Philippine Republic was an attempt to create a currency with an extremely high intrinsic value for its era. What was its primary metal composition?

- A) Pure silver
- B) A gold alloy
- C) Nickel-bronze
- D) Copper with a silver plating

8. Which Southeast Asian nation, during its colonial period, produced the highest denomination banknote that was also the largest in physical dimensions ever issued by a national bank in the region?

- A) Dutch East Indies (Indonesia)
- B) French Indochina
- C) British Malaya
- D) Kingdom of Siam (Thailand)

9. The 'Kinnaree' coin, associated with the ancient Kingdom of Sukhothai (Thailand), is notable for its exceptionally intricate and detailed depiction of a mythical creature. This level of artistic detail was rare for coins of its period in the region.

- A) True
- B) False
- C) Partially true, but other kingdoms had comparable detail
- D) The depiction was standard for the time

10. What is the rarest known specimen of a non-commemorative, officially issued banknote from post-WWII Vietnam, making it a superlative for collectors?

- A) A 100 Dong note from 1955 (South Vietnam)
- B) A 500 Dong note from 1975 (North Vietnam)
- C) A 10 Dong note from 1958 (South Vietnam)
- D) A 1000 Dong note from 1978 (Unified Vietnam)

11. The use of cowrie shells as currency was widespread in Southeast Asia. Which Sultanate is known to have issued the largest and heaviest standardized cowrie shell currency units?

- A) Sultanate of Sulu (Philippines)
- B) Sultanate of Aceh (Indonesia)
- C) Sultanate of Brunei
- D) Sultanate of Maguindanao (Philippines)

12. Which Southeast Asian nation holds the record for issuing the banknote with the most complex and layered anti-counterfeiting features for its time, upon its introduction in the early 21st century?

- A) Singapore
- B) Malaysia
- C) Thailand
- D) Philippines

13. The 'Elephant Tical' of Siam (Thailand) is renowned for its artistic quality. Which metal was most commonly used for these coins, representing a significant economic output for the kingdom?

- A) Gold
- B) Silver
- C) Bronze
- D) Tin

14. What is considered the oldest surviving example of a distinctly Southeast Asian metallic currency that predates the widespread adoption of coinage shaped like animals or abstract forms?

- A) The bar or ring money of the Dong Son culture
- B) The spade or knife money of the Warring States period (influencing Northern Vietnam)
- C) The early inscribed bronze tokens of the Khmer Kingdom
- D) The rudimentary copper tokens of the Srivijaya Empire

15. The 'Dragon Dollar' of the Straits Settlements is highly sought after. Which mint produced the largest quantity of these coins during their issuance period?

- A) The Royal Mint, London
- B) The Calcutta Mint, India
- C) The Birmingham Mint, England
- D) The Royal Canadian Mint